INTRODUCTION

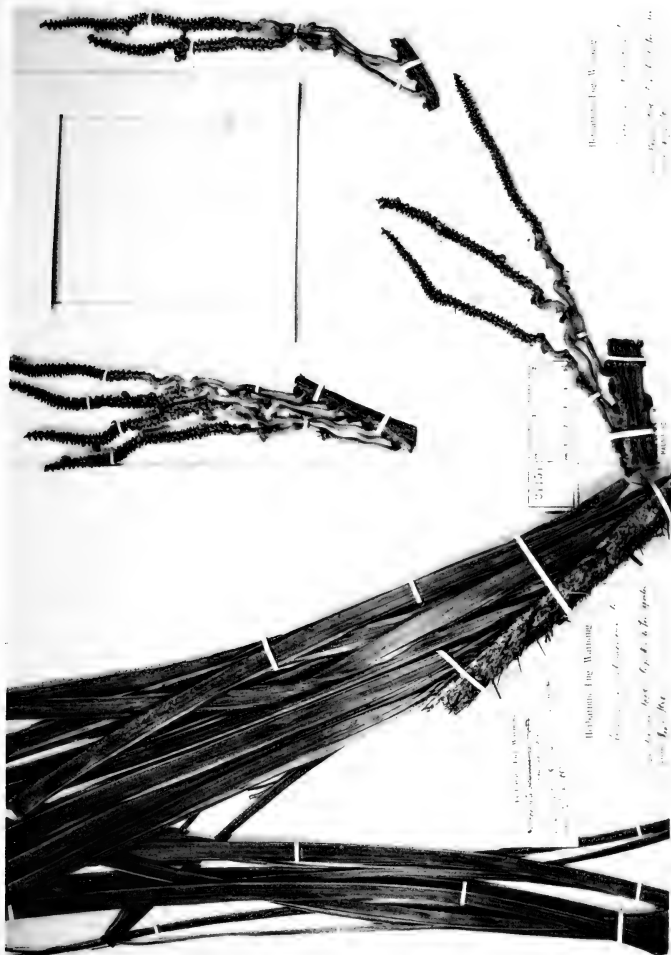

The photographs of type specimens of palms herein reproduced were made under the direction of Mr. J. Francis Macbride prior to 1940. During this time, he was engaged in a much more comprehensive project involving the photographing of type and historical specimens of the thousands of tropical American phanerogamic plants in European herbaria. Initially this project was supported by the Rockefeller Foundation of New York and later by Mr. Stanley Field.

The hitherto unpublished plates of Liebmann, also photographed by Mr. Macbride, are here published for the first time, with the permission and aid of the Botanical Museum in Copenhagen. The original negatives of all of the photographs are deposited in Chicago Natural History Museum (formerly Field Museum).

References to the original descriptions and to the synonymy of the names used in the legends to the plates are found in my Index of American Palms (Field Mus. Nat. Hist., Bot. Ser., vol. 14, pp. 1-438, 1936). Information concerning the herbaria in which the specimens are deposited is given in the legends to the plates, as are the negative numbers.
